FOREWORD

THE 1930 Midwestern Artists' Exhibition is larger and better than any previous show. Three hundred and ten works were accepted by the jury. The interest on the part of our midwestern artists in the Art Institute exhibition is most gratifying. We hope the public will soon realize that as fine work is being produced in the middlewest as elsewhere, and that if we wish to become an artistic community we must encourage the artists living in our territory.

The works on display are for sale and at reasonable prices. The Institute will be glad to advise any one interested.
